A Dove

It has no hubris!
or an industrious take Lacking the desire to cause any spite,
before the sun does, will it wake;

If I tell you its name will it suffice,
you will surely be a tad bit wise!
you will hear it if you rove,
before dawn its a Dove!

My Mother

She always cheers me up
Whenever I'm in a bad mood,
Loving and caring
And making delicious food.

She always makes my frown
Turn upside down.
Brighter than any light,
Braver than the strongest knight

The Ocean

Dive in the ocean,
To see the motion!
Of where all the creatures have been
Little-big, large-small,
Are the creature loved by the sea.
The ocean's words sound like whispers,
As it chatters by flowing,
With the wonders of water.
Making the world full of dulcet,
Of its tranquil flow and peace at the shore...
From Fishes to Sharks,
From turtles to seahorses
From Aggression to peace,
Controlling its waves with please.
Gives everything,
Not expecting anything in return,
Giving out gems like the precious pearls,
The eternal source of the never-ending nature...
Seeking glories through its way,
As it passes through the perils of its ray.
It's a gem we all have got,
How lucky we are that we got her!
Just have a glimpse of the ocean at once,
Not less than a paradise...
I urge! at least once in a life,
Dive in the ocean to see the motion

London

Who am I ?
London London London
Children say.....
I am dream of their lives
With open sky bright ...
All through the morning ...
All through the night...
Do you know the London clock
Tik tok tik tik tok tringggg.....
People say put cotton in your ear
Because anytime the clock says an hour is complete Tringggggggg.....
So fast....so loud....
Do you know the London bridge
Almost falls hundred times in a day
So, think how much times it falls in a year
Think think think....
Now right now.....

In whispers soft and shadows long,
The dream of peace begins its song.
Across the lands, through every heart,
A vision pure, where love imparts.

No borders bind the soul's embrace,
No colors mar the common face.
From mountain high to ocean's crest,
We seek a world where all find rest.

Where words unite and hands extend,
Where conflicts cease and wounds
can mend,
Let every voice in harmony
Compose the world's sweet symphony.

In silence, let our hearts conspire,
To build a world that won't expire.
A place where hope and kindness
blend,
Where peace endures, and sorrows end.

YOGA FOR EVERYDAY

Did you know that yoga is 5000 years old! And has been practiced for healing and calming our inner-self. When you are on a yoga mat just embrace yourself and enjoy everything that is happening around. Doing yoga just 10-15 minutes a day helps relieve all the stress handled by students. Each yoga asana depicts something be it a pose for representation of a deity like Nataraj asana(lord Shiva's dance) or Hanuman asana(Monkey God's Leap) or a pose of an animal.

Each asana holds its own very spiritually deep and knowledgeable meaning. Practicing yoga everyday can also help you engage with your emotions and having a control over them. Yoga can improve strength, balance, flexibility, induces better sleep quality, improves mental clarity and focus and coordination. It can also help with back pain, arthritis symptoms, and so much more.

Even after knowing all the benefits and how impactful it is there are very few people who actually practice yoga every day, start with 10 minutes a day and gradually increase the duration.

Wish you all the very best for your journey of spiritual awakening!

Chalkboard Chronicles

Insights and reflections beyond the classrooms by educators

In the quiet hall where silence sleeps,
A single student's heart still weeps.
His pencil poised, a steady hand,
In a world of questions, he takes a stand.

Around him, echoes of ticking clocks,
And distant murmurs, the clockwork rocks.
Each page a sea, each question a wave,
He rides the tide, so brave, so brave.

His eyes, a flicker of quiet resolve,
In the solitude, his dreams revolve.
The answers hidden in the depths of thought,
A journey through the knowledge he's sought.

The walls, they seem to close him in,
A fortress built from hopes within.
Yet in this moment, stark and stark,
He finds the strength to leave his mark.

For in this test, this silent fight,
He battles on through day and night.
A lone soul in the exam's embrace,
Searching for his place, his grace.

And though the world may seem so vast,
He knows this journey is a part,
Of finding where his dreams will last,
A path that leads to where he'll start.

Echoes in the Classroom

In the quiet of the classroom's light,
Where Macbeth's shadows haunt the night,
And Caesar's whispers, soft yet clear,
I find my students drawing near.

They seek not just the written page,
But answers to life's storm and rage.
Ambition's fire, they wish to tame,
To see beyond the fleeting flame.

"Is power worth the price we pay?
Will trust, like Brutus', fade away?"
Their questions rise, like morning dew,
In every line, they seek what's true.

Though they may seem to stray afar,
From Shakespeare's world, from every scar,
Their minds, like rivers, gently flow,
Through tales of old, new seeds they sow.
For in their hearts, they've come to see,
That life and art are one, not three.
